

Michael S. Kim, Esq. is a partner in the New York City office of Kobre & Kim LLP, where he is a member of the firm's Disputes and Investigations Department. Mr. Kim is a frequent speaker at industry conferences and seminars, and has been quoted in the legal press regarding various aspects of corporate governance and risk management. Mr. Kim is also a past chair of the New York City Bar Association's Corporate Governance Committee. Mr. Kim is a member of the New York State Bar Association, the New York City Bar Association, and the American College of Trust and Estate Counsel.

Michael S. Kim Benchmark Litigation “Benchmark Litigation” “Benchmark”

2013 02 12

Topic: Benchmark Litigation

Benchmark Litigation is a term used to describe a type of litigation that involves the use of benchmarking data to compare a company's performance to that of its peers. Benchmarking is a process of comparing a company's performance to that of its peers in order to identify areas for improvement. Benchmarking data is typically obtained from industry associations or third-party research firms. Benchmarking data can be used in a variety of ways, including to identify areas for improvement, to set performance goals, and to benchmark a company's performance against its peers. Benchmarking data can also be used in litigation to compare a company's performance to that of its peers in order to identify areas for improvement.

Michael S. Kim is a partner in the New York City office of Kobre & Kim LLP, where he is a member of the firm's Disputes and Investigations Department. Mr. Kim is a frequent speaker at industry conferences and seminars, and has been quoted in the legal press regarding various aspects of corporate governance and risk management. Mr. Kim is also a past chair of the New York City Bar Association's Corporate Governance Committee. Mr. Kim is a member of the New York State Bar Association, the New York City Bar Association, and the American College of Trust and Estate Counsel.